CHICAGO, Jan. 27 (I.N.S.).—Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker today were exonerated by Commissioner K. M. Landis of any wrong doing in connection with charges brought by "Dutch" Leonard, and were restored to eligibility in organized baseball, and their names restored to the roster of the Detroit and Cleveland clubs.

Leonard accused Cobb and Speaker, resigned managers of the Detroit Tigers and Cleveland Indians, respectively, of participating in a betting coup hinging around an alleged "thrown game" between their respective teams in September, 1919.

"These players have not been found or are they now guilty of 'fixing' a ball game. By no decent system of justice could such finding be made. Therefore they are not placed on the ineligible list."

Both Cobb and Speaker, Landis revealed, voluntarily withdrew from baseball instead of being forced out, as the public supposed, because they did not desire to have a hearing at which their accuser, "Dutch" Leonard was absent.

"As they (Cobb and Speaker) desire to rescind their withdrawal from baseball, the release which the Detroit and Cleveland clubs granted in the circumstances detailed above, are cancelled and the players' names restored to the reserve lists of their clubs," the decision read.

The thermometer at greenhouses of Bristol Flower Growers stood at four above at five o'clock.

The mercury did record performing in Harrisburg and Central Pennsylvania today.

Falling forty-two degrees in thirty-six hours the mercury touched two degrees above zero at Harrisburg at an early hour today, thus hanging up a record low mark for this winter and for the local United States Weather Bureau on this date.

Until today the low mark for the season stood at five above.

The previous low temperature for January 27, since the establishing of the local weather bureau was 5 degrees above zero. It was recorded in 1907.

FREE LECTURE HERE ON "MEXICO" TONIGHT

James W. Fitzpatrick To Talk Under Auspices Of K. of C.

THE PUBLIC IS INVITED

The present disturbances in Mexico, affecting as they do, American business, politics, labor, and religious sentiment, are watched with unusual interest by a multitude of Americans. James William Fitzpatrick's free public lecture on Mexico in St. Mark's Hall tonight at 8 o'clock promises to draw a record crowd. The issues at stake are, according to Mr. FitzPatrick, more profound and important to the American public than is generally realized. The Mexican crisis, he maintains, has a far-reaching effect on the welfare of this country and all countries of this continent. The announcement of Mr. FitzPatrick's lecture has caused much talk among those familiar with his past lectures on Americanism and democratic ideals. The open forum at the end of the lecture promises to furnish lively and provocative discussions.

As an orator he is internationally known, being specially selected at the Atlantic City Convention of the American Federation of Labor to deliver the eulogy on the late President Gompers. It was his burning eloquence which persuaded the actors in the Actors' Equity Association to commence their struggle in 1919, which finally made them the dominant power in the legitimate theatre.

Mr. FitzPatrick was one of the delegates of the American Federation of Labor who attended the inauguration of President Calles and is in a position not only to discuss Mexico from personal observation and study but also to interpret intelligently the mass of documentary data about conditions there.

Mr. FitzPatrick's lecture is under the auspices of Bristol Council, Knights of Columbus, and is part of the gigantic campaign against Sovietism on this continent inaugurated by the Knights of Columbus at their convention in Philadelphia.

10,000 PIGEONS RELEASED HERE LAST SUMMER

Local Baggage Master of The P. R. R. Gives Interesting Facts About Them ARE TESTED FOR RACES

Time of Arrival of Birds Is Recorded on Time Clocks

During last summer there were released from the local station of the Pennsylvania Railroad, over 10,000 pigeons, all of which apparently found their way to their home-roosts safely.

In the latter part of April, 1926, the consignments commenced arriving, and throughout the several months of mild weather, many cases of birds were received, the same being consigned to the local baggage master, Lewis Trude. The cases contained anywhere from six to fifty birds; and occasionally the number totalled 100.

It was stated by Mr. Trude that the pigeons are shipped to Bristol by their owners, who are in most cases members of clubs. Through the co-operation of the consignee, the owners, either individuals or organizations, are enabled to test their birds, and keep a close watch over them, those returning in the quickest time often being used in the long race contests.

The pigeons received here for liberation are mostly sent from New York, Paterson, Jersey City, Newark, Elizabeth and Trenton. On the cases are instructions for the baggage master to feed the birds lodged therein. Occasionally Mr. Trude has had word from the owners that the birds have returned home without mishap. "Very little trouble is experienced in connection with the safe arrival of the birds at their destinations," according to Mr. Trude. Some of these pigeons are reputed to be valued at $200; and the majority of them, while worth a great deal less, are highly prized.

After the flying ability of the birds has been tested in the above manner, the owners, who are oftentimes members of clubs of pigeon fanciers, enter them in race flights of 100 miles. At the beginning of the race a tiny ring with a number is attached to the foot of each bird. Started off from a point distant from the town in which the various owners live, the birds are eagerly watched for by the owners. When one individual's entry alights on the roost, the owner immediately takes the ring from off the foot and places it in a time clock, used for that purpose. The clock ceases to function as soon as the ring is placed inside.

The time clocks are taken by the numerous persons having entries in the race to the board of judges appointed by the clubs. The judges then open the clocks, and announce as the winner the one whose clock has stopped at the earliest hour.

A record is kept at the local baggage room, pertaining to the number of cases received, the number of birds contained therein, and the date of releasing. Pigeon fanciers have found this an excellent way to test their birds, thus being enabled to choose those best suited for long flights.

DAILY NEWS LETTER

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 27.—Connecticut's motor vehicle department found itself possessed of $3,924.89 in bad checks when the rush for auto licenses cleared up early this year. As a result of this situation the state's income was increased by upward of $1,000. A state law makes a charge of five dollars extra upon the person issuing the check, the law having been passed when the check situation was first discovered. The person issuing the check to pay for his license is ordered to produce a certified check, money order, or cash within eight days if the check is bad. According to department officials they all come across even with the five-dollar bonus, and the protest fee for the bank, likewise.

(Special to The Courier)
DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 27.—Eight men, five hundred gallon still, approximately one thousand gallons of alleged alcohol, about 60% of which had been redistilled and the balance denatured, said to be of a very poisonous grade, was seized in a raid on what is known as "The Old Gallagher Farm," Emille, Bristol Township, early yesterday morning.

Six of the men caught in the raid were released in $1000 bail each and the other two men are in the county jail here in default of bail for the same amount.

All the men were arrested on the charge of manufacturing and possessing liquor. All of the men were given hearings before Justice of the Peace Rigby, Cornwells Heights, late yesterday afternoon.

Those arrested: Louis Vanella, Jasura Lacolla, Giuseppe Jerbino, Joseph Gordon, Joseph L. Reisman, Thomas Bullo, Charles Lacenco, Elias Goldstein.

The raid was conducted yesterday morning at 4.30 by Corporal Wm. Burgoon, commander of the State Police at the Doylestown sub-station, Private John Bucco and Officer Ray Sattler, of Bristol Township.

The plant is the largest one ever seized in Bucks county, and is estimated in value at $15,000. There was a large amount of sugar and other raw material on hand ready for a capacity operation of the still. The plant was located in a barn on the Gallagher farm, which had been leased by a Trenton man, whose name is not given at this time.

The men arrested are said to have offered the police officers $1000 if they would allow them to continue the operation of the plant.

Seventy-one five-gallon cans of alleged alcohol had been redistilled, according to the officers, just previous to their arrival, and a truck that was on the grounds had eight alcohol drums in it. The officers worked practically all day, dismantling the plant destroying that which the law allows them to destroy and removing the balance to the county jail here.

The men arrested gave addresses in Philadelphia, Trenton, N. J., and New York.

The huge still was hauled through Bristol Borough late yesterday afternoon upon an open truck, followed by the police officers in a coupe.

THE COLLEGIATE TREND

Universities and colleges in this country now have a combined matriculation of 750,000 young men and women, of fifty persons for every 10,000 of population. The French ratio is thirteen in every 10,000, and England's is fifteen. Is this necessarily to the credit of the United States, as it appears to be on the face of the figures?

This is an age of specialization which gives the college an important place in the nation's industrial life. Mechanical progress alone calls for thousands of technically trained minds every year; and it is upon the colleges and universities that the nation depends for most of these minds. It is a question, however, whether this country is not, in its educational system, sacrificing too much for material gain.

Technically and professionally the schools of higher learning in this country are thorough; but do the same standards of thoroughness maintain in the intellectual and cultural training of American youth? If the United States is to lead the world in intellectual fields as well as in industry and commerce, its schools must give to their lecture halls the thoroughness culturally that those of certain European schools provide.

Some see a tendency here for education to lean more and more toward technical and professional lines and further away from the intellectual and the arts. But others believe this trend has reached its zenith and can already see a movement in the opposite direction. Whichever is the case, this country needs and can produce both types and there never has been a more propitious time for producing them.

Universities and colleges can do society and the nation no better service than by assisting their undergraduates to find themselves, in the sense of determining the life's work for which they are physically, mentally and temperamentally best fitted.

THE WAR ON BILLBOARDS

Until comparatively recently the billboard and poster interests paid little attention to public protest or public rights. The evil of the billboard-marred landscape spread until finally the outdoor advertising industry was given the option of correcting the evil or submitting to governmental regulation.

The past year has seen marked improvement in a number of states and municipalities. Roadside trees and rocks are no longer defaced by crude and garish signs. Motorists once again have an unobstructed view of the scenic beauties so long hidden behind billboards which sought to impress the passing public by mere size.

These changes for the better have been brought about by public opinion, legislation and the recognition by highway authorities of the menace misplaced signboards hold for motor traffic. In several states it is unlawful to erect signs in any form within a certain distance of any public highway.

Among the organizations lately to enlist in the campaign against misuse of billboards is the National Association of Real Estate Boards. Through its committee on city planning and zoning it recently issued a statement to its members calling attention to the fact that because of the position of realtors as custodians of property, they are vitally interested in outdoor-advertising control and measures to prevent mutilation of nature by the outdoor advertiser.

Don't Tell the Wife

"DON'T TELL THE WIFE" starring Irene Rich, is a Warner Bros. picture.

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismatches. Joan wants a divorce. Ranny hesitates, loving her, although secretly knowing she loves Abner Gratman. While they are guests on a week-end cruise on the Stinner yacht, Stinner, Ranny's old enemy, Ranny avenges Clare means nothing to him, mollifying Stinner. Ranny punishes Abner in a way that nearly costs his life and Joan's. Later, Joan is overjoyed when Ranny tells her he will get a divorce. He selects desertion as a ground; when she reminds him of his recent cruel prank he claims he has been a model husband, saying—

CHAPTER XVI.—Continued

"Come, now, Joan," said Ranny, "that little excursion wasn't entirely my fault. It was Abner's, for cutting the dory loose. Whatever his virtues as a lover, fradiness compels me to remark that the lad does lack sense. If it hadn't been for you he'd have gone down. Oh, well, that's none of my affair. I was about to remark that inasmuch as I was not insane, a felon, impotent, congenitously, or already married, when we were married, the only other possible chance for you would be to catch me at—err—misconduct. Intimacies with another female, as it were. And, of course, ha! virtuously, with a perished thought shrug, 'such a charge would be absurd, against one of my well-known impeccable morality.'"

"Indeed!"

"Look here, now, Joan, I don't like the tone of that 'indeed!'"

"To be blunt, then, I'm not so sure of your self-vaunted virtue."

"You were positively shameless when that nasty little blonde widow—"

"She's all right! Don't be too rough on her."

"Defending her, eh? I'm growing less and less sure about the disinterestedness of your willingness to get a divorce for MY sake!"

"Well—"

"Why can't you look me in the eye? Why can't you give me a straightforward answer? Oh, Ranny, don't lie to me! Don't make believe you are doing all this for MY sake—"

"What else could be my motive, dear?"

"You're evasive. That's a suspicious sign. And it isn't loyal. Anyway, I've admitted my love for Abner. You ought to be honorably frank, too."

"But," laughing heartily, "I tell you there is no one!"

"See, you can't say it without laughing!"

"Oh," serious again, "but I can. No one can ever take your place in my heart. I shall live alone with my memories!"

"In the words of the cop who keeps company with our cook—ap-plesauce!"

"Really dear, you're very silly!"

"Silly? I like that! What difference could it make to me now if, for instance, you told me that you wanted this divorce so that you could marry—well, let's see, say Mrs. Clonemane!"

"Clare?"

"Oh, 'Clare,' eh? How familiarly and naturally you call her by her first name. Come, now, doesn't that make it plain?"

"Certainly not, and I must say it isn't becoming for you to jealously drag her into our private troubles!"

"Further proof? Defending her again? The giddy, affected, intriguing creature—"

"There's the bell!" hastily, "it's Abner, I guess. I'll run down and keep him company until you are ready." Ranny made his escape with relief.

He noticed over his shoulder, however, as he went out that Joan, instead of making haste to finish her primping for Abner, sat and stared reflectively after him. This caused a slight, quizzical smile on his face as he descended the grand staircase, two at a time, to greet Abner.

Abner was awkward and ill at ease, hardly knowing whether or not this unexpected summons to the Forbes mansion had been actuated by a desire on Ranny's part to commit mayhem and the rest of the seven cardinal varieties of assault and battery.

"What do you want, Forbes?" he asked petulantly. "Remember, I can still have you arrested—I've got plenty of witnesses."

"No need, Gratman," soothed Ranny lightly. "I just wanted you to call so that I could congratulate you!"

"Upon what?"

"Upon getting my wife's hand in marriage—that is, in the near future, after she is no longer my wife. Just a little matter of legal rigmorale to go through—and then she's yours, my boy!"

"Why should I believe a word you say?"

"It was hard to be merry when one wanted to be murderous. But Ranny was. 'Joan will be down herself in a moment or two. She'll confirm it!' he beamed.

Ranny hemmed and hawed after that until, out of the corner of his eye, he caught sight of Joan coming down the broad stairs, and knew she was within earshot. Then he went on in a conversational, matter-of-fact tone:

"Mighty lucky stroke of fortune for you, son, with your paltry income, to marry a woman with a million a year in her own name. You should, for a wife can't respect a husband whom she supports—I'll be able to say: 'They are happy, Joan and Abner. And it is I who have made them so. It is my work! The thought is positively touching!'"

"Ranny, don't be so ridiculous. How can you joke about this matter?"

"How and where are you going to get a divorce?" prodded Abner.

"Well," with a quick glance at Joan, "I did plan to get it in Minnesota, when I'm living there on business. But I've reconsidered, because Joan raised the point that I would have to sue her. That was an unpardonable slip of gallantry in planning on my part. I'm sorry. I've figured out, instead, that as soon as I go away I won't tell Joan where I'm going, and I'll never communicate with her. Therefore she can sue me for divorce in New York State on the grounds of desertion."

"That's better!" snapped Joan.

"But I thought that there was only one ground for divorce in New York—adultery!" objected Abner, suspicious again.

"No," said Ranny blandly, "desertion has lately been made a cause. The Knock Arden law, it's called. There's only one slight inconvenience—"

"What's that?" simultaneously.

"You will have to wait seven years. The time necessary to presuppose a person, from whom you haven't heard, is dead!"

"SEVEN years! Impossible! Absurd!"

"Then it shall have to be as I suggest."

"Let him get it, Joan. What difference does it really make—so long as it sets you free?"

Joan was stubborn. "There's Parist!"

"We'd both have to go, and I can't take the time away from my new job!"

Joan shrugged. "I suppose you'll have it to your fancy!"

Ranny was contrite. "Oh, don't put it that way, Joan. Let's part friends—dear, dear friends."

He rang for the butler, and ordered his hat and stick. "Well, now that I've told you two the good news, I've got to toddle along to the club. Stinner's waiting for me. Important plans to discuss, you know, now that I'm a business man."

"Are you sure you're going to meet Stinner?"

"Ha! Ha! How funny you are, Joan."

"Dodging again!"

He accepted his things from the butler. "Sorry, but I really have to run along now."

Suddenly, and so unexpectedly that he nearly knocked her over, Ranny bent and kissed Joan upon the forehead. His face was grave; his eyes far away.

"Excuse me if I seem a bit sentimental," he apologized, "but one cannot have lived so long in the greatest possible intimacy with a woman without there being—a certain grief at parting. You will think of me sometimes, Joan—and the jolly times we had together?"

"Right!" said Joan, somehow feeling uncomfortably like an astute movie heroine.

In fact I do not even work,
At a department store.

But I'm a floorwalker just the same

Race Champion Picks Buick Brougham

PETER DE PAOLO, adorned with the $3,500 medal which he won as 1925 automobile speedway champion, came to Flint recently to take delivery of a Buick car.

De Paolo's new Buick, a 1927 brougham, is his fourth car of this make in the last two years. In fact, he has never owned any other make.

In explaining his preference for Buicks, De Paolo said that the valve-in-head engine, for ordinary driving as well as on the race track, proved superior to any other type.

"My Buicks, with their valve-in-head engines and mechanical four wheel brakes, have given me wonderful performance and the best of service," De Paolo stated. "That is the reason why I have never bought any other make of car.

Although my previous Buicks have been wonders on the road and have given great satisfaction, I believe the 1927
Buick is truly what the makers say it is, the greatest Buick ever built. It is certainly the greatest car I have ever driven. Acceleration from a creep to 75 miles an hour is literally without vibration. The 1927 Buick sets a new standard of performance for cars of any make, no matter what their price. I was amazed at the marvelous performance of this car, and at the luxury of its fittings and trim."

De Paolo, in addition to his championship medal, carries another presented to him personally by Premier Mussolini of Italy which designates him as "Knight of Speed." He is also an honorary member of the Italian Hundred Mile an Hour Club, and wears its emblem, also a present from Mussolini, in his coat lapel. This emblem, De Paolo says, gains instant recognition in Italy for anyone wearing it.

De Paolo left Flint for Charlotte, N. C., where he will compete in a race. At present the little Italian driver is in second place for the 1926 championship, pressing Harry Hartz hard for the lead.

"DON'T TELL THE WIFE," starring Irene Rich, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife Joan, are temperamental misfits. Joan wants a divorce. Ranny hesitates, loving her, although secretly knowing she loves Abner Gratzman. While they are guests on a week-end cruise on the Stivner yacht a widow, Clara, rams Ranny, accusing Stivner's jealousy. Ranny accuses Clara means nothing to him, mollifying Stivner. Ranny punishes Abner in a way that nearly costs his life and Joan's. Later, Joan is overjoyed when Ranny tells her he will get a divorce. He is friendly to Abner and sentimental to Joan in a way that subtly affects her infatuation for Abner.

CHAPTER XVII.—Continued
Ranny was being transported from one mood into another with astonishing rapidity. Gone the tearful voice; in its stead an aggressive, threatening timbre, as he stood over Abner, eyes flashing fire. He thundered:
"Mind you, boy—if you're not good to her, you'll have me to answer to!"
"Yes, sir!" quaked Abner.
"First you are ridiculous—now you're dramatic. Ranny, do behave! He won't bullyrag me, I'll assure you," said Joan.
Ranny experienced another change of mood. To levity this time. "I reckon not," he said drolly. "You're bigger than he is, eh, what? If he wanted to kiss you on the brow, as I did, he'd have to stand on a chair—droll, what?"
Joan and Abner, however, seemed more uncomfortable than amused.

Again a change. Earnest, this time, admonitory.
"Remember, Joan, it'll be over in six months unless you gum things up. Under no circumstances must you."

"Aren't you going to call me 'dear' anymore?"
"You ever come to my home in Minnesota?"
He bade them good evening, and went out.
"Joan, dear," chortled Abner, "Isn't this a wonderful surprise?"
Joan was not paying any attention to Abner, and did not hear him. She was saying softly, half to herself:
"Now I wonder why he's so anxious to have me stay away from his house—in Minnesota? Is it because she's going to be there perhaps?"

CHAPTER XVII
The very next day Ranny went away.
He told Joan that in the interview of the evening before with Stivner at the Club he had made complete arrangements, and there was, of course, no purpose in delaying his departure.
"You know, Joan, the sooner—"
"Aren't you going to call me 'dear' anymore?"
"Why, yes, that is, if it is quite the proper thing to call another man's fiancée by any such honeyed expression!"
"I'm still your wife, you know," coldly.
"How," he affected to puzzle, "can you be my wife and his fiancée? I say, now, that's bigamy in spirit if not in letter, eh, old dear? Besides, there's a point of personal safety involved. I don't want to have an indignant bantam rooster like Abner thrash me for being too affectionate with my—err, with his fiancée!"
"You needn't have much fear on that score. To call Abner a bantam rooster is, to say the least, gross exaggeration."
"My dear, you're not defending the man of your heart as enthusiastically as a thrilled bride-to-be should! Surely you don't entertain doubts of his manly prowess—but enough of that now. We won't quarrel about whether or not Abner Gratzman is a bantam rooster. One thing, at least, is a dead certain fact. He's a mighty lucky duck to have won the love of so splendid a woman as you."
"Thank you, Ranny," in surprise, and with a not unpleased smile. "If you had voiced as much appreciation of me during marriage as you are on getting out of it, things might not have reached this pass."

Ranny shrugged deprecatingly. "There's no use moaning over spilt love."
"Still we needn't have been so abrupt about things. We might have held a bit of a farewell party, just you and I—"
Ranny was matter-of-fact. "Above all things, let's avoid mawkishness. Now that we've decided on our course, celerity should be the watchword. Curtail the agony, you know. This brings me back to what I was going to say when you began to argue—"
"Ranny Forbes, I never argue!"
"—that," calmly, "the sooner I reach Minnesota and establish residence the sooner you will be free to fly honorably to the strong refuge of Abner's arms, the safe haven of his manly bosom."
Ranny's face was perfectly straight, and Joan searched it in vain for signs that he was making game of her.
"You seem to be in a desperate hurry to get free!"
Ranny's face reflected his astonishment. "Why, I thought it was YOU who wanted the nasty thing over with as soon as possible!"
"I do, but—yes, of course I do!"
The uncertain quality in Joan's voice and manner dissipated suddenly. In its stead there came the decisive crispness of the Joan whom Ranny knew best. The defiant Joan Forbes!
That ended that.
And so Ranny went away.
No sooner had he gone than things began to happen. Little buzzes in the beginning—thunderclaps before long.

It started when Joan suddenly remembered that Ranny had not mentioned any temporary hotel address to which he would mail sent. In fact, now that she was reminded along that score, he had not even declared that he would ever write to her, after he got settled, to give his address.
Perhaps he had thought she could find it out from Stivner if she were anxious to know it.
Still, he might have been more thoughtful. That was Ranny, though: HER Ranny. Thoughtless and carefree as a boy.
She fished casually with her maid, knowing that the girl had been "keeping company" with Ranny's valet. An understairs romance that had been diverting to her for some time—well, before they had ceased to be sensitive to the romantic things of life.
Ranny had taken his valet with him, of course—a Hungarian, who had been in his employ for a dozen years, and was as essential in Ranny's richly ordered scheme of life as a collar button.

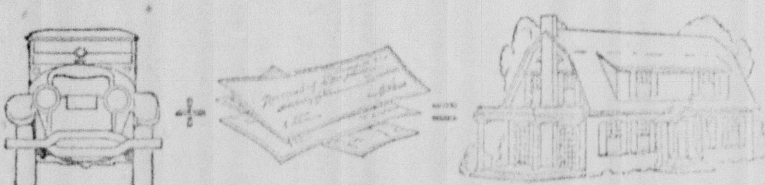

"Mimi," probed Joan, "of course you're going to write to Yarno in Minnesota?"
"Meenecosta, Madam? That ees not th' name he give me. Eet ees, how you say eet, Edayhoe!"
"IDAHO!" Joan gasped. "Why, you must be mistaken. Mr. Forbes said they were going to—"
Joan checked herself. She could not discuss the authenticity of Ranny's information with her maid, of course. So she just stared at the girl—stared and stared and pondered!

Then, it that were not mystifying enough, an encounter with Mrs. Teffens that afternoon at a meeting of the Park Avenue Women's Committee on Penny Lunches for Poor Picknickers, of which both were leading lights, shot her higher into the air.

Mrs. Teffens took the very first opportunity to get Joan aside with malicious cordiality and friendliness, and gab: "My dear, congratulations. I've heard the news. Everyone has. Ranny has gone to Nevada to get a divorce."
"NEVADA?"
"Why, yes, of course," giggling. "Proud creature, don't look so much as though you're setting NEWS. Ranny has told it all around." Mrs. Teffens grew very confidential. "Of course, he did warn everyone not to tell his wife WHERE he was going, but we thought—"
"You thought correctly, my dear Mrs. Teffens. Just one of Ranny's little pleasantries. Droll lad, Ranny!"

"Nevertheless," sniffed Mrs. Teffens to another friend, as Joan walked away, "something tells me Ranny Forbes did NOT tell his wife where he was going! I believe he was in earnest for once in his life!"
"I wonder," raged Joan inwardly, "why he doesn't want me to know the truth as to where he has gone? What is he trying to put over on me, with all this idiotic 'don't tell the wife' nonsense?"
The "worst," following immemorial precedent, was yet to come! The telephone rang that evening while Joan was dressing to go with Abner to the Opera opening. Its peremptory jangling carried so strange a foreboding of trouble that Joan knew it was bad news even before she took the phone from her maid, who said, grimacing:
"Oh, he ees so excite he almost break my eardrum. Eet ees Monsieur Stivner, Madam!"
(To be continued)

CAR + RENT = A HOME

Being a Story of What Might Have Been

John Jones was an ordinary good citizen. He had a happy home (entirely at so much for himself), a good wife and two healthy, healthy youngsters.

Each month John paid the landlord $5.00, a moderate rental, and the Jones family was happy.

Came a time when John felt that the polished patter of the automobile salesman, $200.00 down and $20.00 a month he paid for his new "Four in Line" sedan.

For two years the Jones family enjoyed their new plaything. Then the Browns and the Grays rushed by in their "latest motor masterpieces" and the Joneses looked at each other and said: "More speed, more cylinders, and four-wheel brakes. Getting a new car was the answer."

But—this time John hesitated to meet up with a real estate salesman. He talked—Jones listened—waited, much and received a hard job. Translated into dollars and cents:

here was the lot: His car, complete with fourth, insurance and "tax free" had cost him exactly $2,000. In the two years of steady running it had traveled over 2,000 miles at an average of 40 m.p.h. and cost him—total $250.00.

His new car cost him $2,750.00 had been used for rent. That is, expenditures for car and rent cost the two year period amounted to $2,550.00. Calculated $250.00 to the present market value of the old car meant a net expenditure of $4,500.00—with nothing to show.

An average home would cost him approximately $6,000.00. That would mean a net expenditure of $1,000.00 more than the car had cost him in seven years—and then no further payments for rent.

The Jones family have returned to the same leather room for transport. It is a real home. "Satisfactory" business now becomes romance. The new car will come later.

CHRISTMAS at LONERIDGE
BY GERTRUDE
WALTON

"THIS man says we are here for the night, and no way out of it. We're twenty-five miles from John's, too. Repairs will have to be brought four miles from Coalton. Those huts down the hill belong to the Loneridge coal mines. The miners will have guests tonight," Mr. Long announced as he drew some tools from his automobile. The mine mechanic who had been procured when Mr. Long had walked to one of the shanties down the long winding hill when his car had refused to go, smiled and informed Mr. and Mrs. Long that he would find a place for them to stay for the night.

It was the afternoon before Christmas, when they were on their way to Mrs. Long's brother, John's country home, where the Long children had gone the day before with Mrs. Long's sister's family, to be present at the family Christmas Eve festivities, with a large tree by the fireplace for the families of five brothers and sisters with parents of both Mr. and Mrs. Long. In the car were gifts not only for the Long children but for most of the other relatives. After telephoning from the mine-foreman's office to John's family that they must spend the night at Loneridge, the packages were carried to one of the better looking huts of the foreign-speaking folks who received them hospitably. During the evening, while the hostess was preparing the meal, the woman by means of signs and unintelligible English made Mrs. Long understand that there was little Christmas festivity in the mining town.

"This woman has shown me courtesy and kindness; here is an opportunity to prove some Christmas courage and character," Mrs. Long whispered to her husband as plans began percolating through her mind. Soon the children were helping decorate the small tree which Mrs. Long had brought from her husband's store for younger members of the relatives' families, as well as her own children. Mrs. Schalska popped corn, Christmas-tree trimmings, oranges, nuts, candy and candles were produced from among the packages in the car, and a hurried trip to a small store enlarged the stock of goodies. The children, taking turns in carrying the tree, with Mr. and Mrs. Schalska, Mr. and Mrs. Long started out. Every house with boys and girls, aged or sick ones, was visited. The tree was placed on a table or chair, candles lighted for a moment while some goodies were distributed.

After a visit to each place, the family was invited to accompany this Christmas Cheer company while carols were sung outside and inside until everyone was so happy that some shouted while others cried for joy. One dear woman after listening to the story of the significance of the Yuletide season which some had made Mr. Long understand they wished to learn, drying her eyes on the corner of a faded apron, called Mrs. Long an "Angel." The glad notes of the Christmas caroling soon reached the farther ends of Loneridge, whose inhabitants joined in a community Christmas as they made their way to the large engine house where the tree was placed in the center while they sang patriotic songs. Then, while hushed quietness reigned, Mrs. Long repeated the Christmas story, after which Mr. Long led softly in singing. "All is calm, all is bright," when some one touched Mrs. Long on the sleeve. It was her brother, John, who was waiting in his big car to take them to his home. After their own festivities he had slipped away to bring the stranded travelers as a surprise next morning to all but his wife. As Mrs. Long arranged the packages around the small tree on the table possibly there were visions of happy faces of Loneridge boys and girls with their note discordant in tone but full of love-harmony while they sang "All is bright." Perhaps she wondered at the "peace that passed understanding" which she had that Christmas. She may have understood that the Loneridge Christmas Eve would be one of the happiest memories of her life because wherever and whenever the message "Inasmuch" is lived out, there will be "Peace and Good Will Among Men."

A Christmas Carol

A bright and blessed Christmas Day,
With echoes of the angels' song,
And peace that cannot pass away,
And holy gladness calm and strong,
And sweet heart-carols flowing free,
This is my Christmas wish to thee!

BILLY'S UNCLE

Feeding Cows Like Hogs Will Boost Dairy Profits

If the dairyman fed his cows as the hog man feeds his pigs, there would be more money in dairying, according to the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics.

"The hog man interested in getting his pigs to marketable weight in the shortest time and with the least effort and expense has tried ration after ration for his pigs until he is now pretty close to the best ration for accomplishing the result he is after," the institute states. "For the hog man, the proof of the feed is in the feeding. Contrast this attitude with the attitude of the dairyman. Instead of finding out what a given ration will do with his own cows in his own barn, the dairyman has continued to make up his ration on the test-tube theory of chemical analysis, which has little to do with the amount of milk the cow will give. The dairyman tests out gasoline in his own car, but he feeds his cows on the ration arrived at with pencil and paper. Is it any wonder that under the standards of our present knowledge the average cow in view of her possibilities is not as good as the average hog?"

While the stomach of the cow is the only true guide on what a given ration will do for that cow, there are certain characteristic elements that every good dairy ration possesses, according to the institute. In the first place, the ration should contain a variety of foods. It should be bulky and it should be palatable. But in the selection of his ration the dairyman who mixes his own feed is at a disadvantage to the dairyman using a ready mixed ration. There is a wide range of difference in the analysis of the ingredients or even different lots of the same ingredients that go into the making of a dairy ration, and it's not uncommon for the same dairyman's mixture to work out one week and be a failure the next. On the other hand, the commercial feed maker through actual tests with cows and the use of chemical and mechanical means to analyze and mix the many ingredients that go into their feed, are able to make a ration that is standardized and uniform and which will give similar results under like conditions.

What Is a Diuretic?

People Are Learning the Value of Occasional Use.

EVERYONE knows that a laxative stimulates the bowels. A diuretic performs a similar function to the kidneys. Under the strain of our modern life, our organs are apt to become sluggish and require assistance. More and more people are learning to use Doan's Pills, occasionally, to insure good elimination which is so essential to good health. More than 50,000 grateful users have given Doan's signed recommendations. Scarcely a community but has its representation. Ask your neighbor!

Ignoring the Time Element In Reforms

11 Mason Street,
Cambridge, Mass.
April 21, 1925.

Mrs. William Tilton, Chairman Women's Allied Organizations of Massachusetts, has sent the following reply to the Editor of the Detroit Free Press, who has called for the modification of the 18th Amendment.

Dear Sir:

"In calling for the modification of the 18th Amendment after a five years' trial, we would like to ask you frankly where the reforms of the world would have been if your spirit had animated the reformers, your speed spirit.

"The United States abolished the Slave-Trade in 1807. In 1810 Madison is calling on the Nation to put down the illicit traffic. In 1817, Monroe is calling for more enforcement laws. In the thirties the illicit traffic blazes into 200,000 slaves smuggled across annually.

"But in 1871 we find in our Congressional Record the last act against the Slave-Trade. You see it took more than 5 short years after the Prohibition Slave Law was passed to enforce it. It took two generations!

"Take again our Constitution, 1787. It made us a nation, on paper. Then came the struggle to enforce the law. Washington died 1799 in despair that the Constitution would ever become a working reality. John Marshall took up the fight against de-centralization and for federalism. He died in 1835 in despair that we should ever become a nation. But we came through despite the Doubting Thomases and the men who saw more money in local option than in nationalism.

"But it took more than five years to come through. You and I like to think we should have had the staying power to see these glorious reforms through, that fifty years rather than five years would have been the length of our vision.

"Detroit Free Press.—Ask you would any great reform have come to pass had five years been the limit given in which to bring the unconvinced minority up to the new ideal and work out all the intricacies of enforcement?"

"I ask you,—would your attitude have lost or gained for us the abolition of the Slave-Trade or the establishment of our Republic?"

"Detroit Free Press,—read a little history, think a little longer, probe a little deeper, and come back to the ranks of those who enlist, not for five years, but for the duration of the War."

Sincerely,
(Signed) ELIZABETH TILTON.
